Tribune Publishing Co.

Meadville, Pa.

HISTORICAL STATEMENT.

The Round Table was organized in Meadville, December 16th, 1887; the expressed purpose of the organization was to afford social and intellectual culture for its members. Dr. T. L. Flood was the founder and until his death on June 16th, 1916, continued to be the leading spirit of the organization. At first the membership was limited to twenty-four but this number has been increased until now the By-Laws provide for a membership of 100, which provision was adopted in 1913. During the thirty-four years since its organization 366 men from the various businesses and professions of Meadville have been elected to membership.

Regular monthly meetings have been held from the time of its organization, from September to May, inclusive; at each meeting a dinner is served followed by an essay or more rarely an address and an informal discussion. Three hundred and eighteen essays have been read before the members of the Round Table, more usually by one of the members, upon a great variety of subjects.
